The Giltweasel

13th issue of the Giltweasel(taut, and experimental) issued in its 13th month (short issue, cheap and quick) using only `13's whats a 13 you ask 13's are poems (haha) supposedly that are written following the order of the alphabet (a,b,c,d for those of you who skipped a grade or two) two words on each line(following said alphabet) winding up with 13 lines hence the name 13.

Simple , eh?

well, they just happen to be fun too. and they tend to spawn some interesting new introductions to English vocabulary.

not your normal ordinary giltweasel at that. heres your contents: some poems(13's in fact) by: Tami Regula, Brian Carpenter, Steven Velozo, Greg Beaver, The Giltweasel, Jamaal White, and... anyone else? guess not.

Also, regarding the IRC #poetry conference get-together this Summer I have provided some information for would-be conferees as an insert to the weasel document.

And no! I'm not the least bit superstitious.
